March the 18th this year provides an opportunity for celebration. And I don't just mean for hard-pressed florists and chocolatiers hoping for a boost in their cash-flow. Mother's Day has become an international phenomenon, in part because of commercial interests, but also, I believe, because we recognise that it is a good thing to appreciate and celebrate those who gave us life.

In Britain, mothers are traditionally celebrated on Mothering Sunday, the fourth Sunday of Lent, a welcome half-way break in a season of austerity. But what of the fathers? Hard as the men might try to be supportive and 'hands-on' with their families, much of the burden, especially in those exhausting early years, falls on the mother. Much of mothering is hard grind, a 24-7 commitment to putting the needs of a small, dependent human being before your own, and bearing the toll, physically and emotionally.

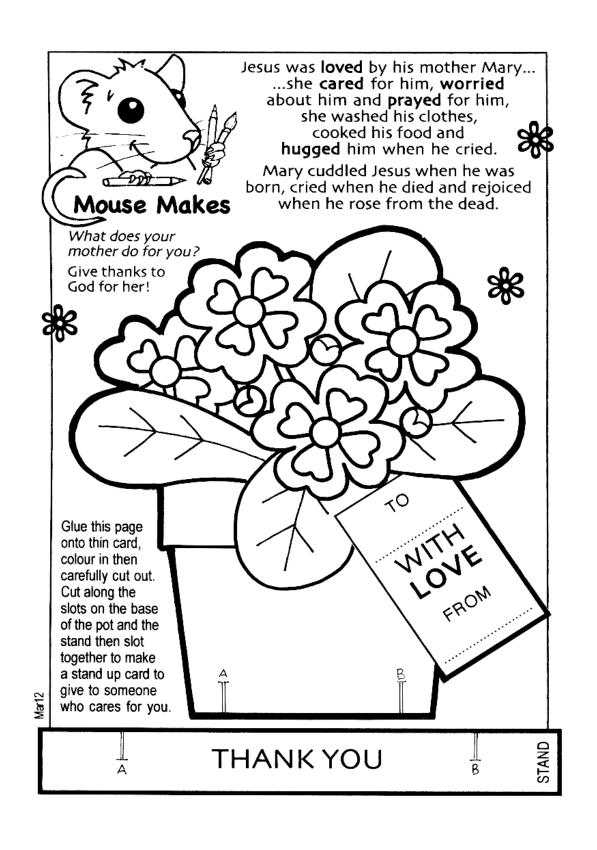

Of course, there are rewards to be had along the way, and the joy of witnessing landmark achievements such as your baby's first words. It was not very diplomatic of my children that the first word each of them uttered was not the deserved and deeply rewarding 'ma-ma' but the rather galling 'da-da'! Of course, it was probably nothing to do with expressing a preference for one parent, but simply making an easier sound.

Whatever the significance of our first words, it is universally true that we are not very good at appreciating those who have given so much to us, in particular our parents. Mothering Sunday and the fathers' counterpart in June are an opportunity, in a small way, to address this oversight.

But there is a greater oversight that needs to be addressed. The love and sacrifice of our human parents directs us to an even greater, even more loving Parent, the one 'from whom every family in heaven and on earth is named' (according to Ephesians 3:15). And like our earthly parents, we often take the heavenly Father for granted and neglect to express our gratitude to Him for His goodness to us.

Whilst our mothers give birth to us, feed, clothe, educate, and comfort us, God is the ultimate source of all those things. Whilst our mothers have made and make great sacrifices out of their love for us, all that is a pointer towards the much greater love of the God who became one of us in his Son, and the unimaginable sacrifice made so that the beloved children of the heavenly Father might have life.

Didcot Emergency Foodbank

February 7th 2012

Thank you so much for your recent contributions to the Foodbank. January has been our busiest month yet and I thought it would be helpful for you to know the quantity of food that has been used to support our clients.

We have supported 90 people with 3 days' worth of food, this adds up to 2610 individual items of food. The total number of items donated in January to the foodbank was 600. I have made two large purchases using the Nectar card and one cash purchase.

We feel so privileged that we have been able to help so many needy people but are very aware that if this level of need continues then we will need to do some serious thinking and praying as to how we are able to satisfy the demand. I would be so grateful if you would continue to pray for the foodbank that God would really use us in His service and that we might stand like a beacon in the town showing his love to those in need. (One very recent client sat in the foodbank sobbing as the hamper was put together for her, she couldn't believe that others had given so selflessly enabling her to feed her children).

If you would like to know more about the Nectar card scheme or would like to hold a card then please do speak to me and I can let you have one.

Thank you so much for your support.

Tuesday & Fridays, 11-1pm is 0755 1984 465

Mother and Son

Luke 1:26-38

She was to carry the Son of God To the world,
For the world,
To not be afraid,
Though ridiculed and rejected
To choose to trust and accept,
To serve and obey,

To serve and obey,
To step into the possibilities
Of God's power and purposes,
To believe.

He was to carry the sins
Of the world,
To forgive the world,
To not be afraid, but
Through love to cast out fear,
Though ridiculed and rejected
To choose to trust and accept,
To serve and obey,
To make possible
God's power and purposes
For those who believe.

The angel announced The son to the mother, Knowing she would be Mother to the son.
